

1796-1911

Norwich Bulletin and Courier.

115 YEARS OLD.

Subscription price, 12c a week; 50c a month; $5.00 a year.

Entered at the Postoffice at Norwich, Conn., as second-class matter.

Telephone Calls:
Bulletin Business Office, 458
Bulletin Editorial Office, 31-2
Bulletin Job Office, 35-5
Bulletin Office, Room 3 Murray Building, Telephone 210.

Norwich, Tuesday, Oct. 31, 1911.

THE APPLE NEEDS BOONING.

The freezing nights are upon us and hundreds of barrels of apples, good and indifferent, are going to waste on the trees and under them in all parts of New England, although the crop is said to be short by several million bushels.

There is not a more healthful fruit than apples, eaten ripe or cooked, and the Canadian farmers tell us they are good for stock property feed. This year's crop of apples will make 30,000,000 barrels, and the apple-eating season lasts five months. In these five months each able-bodied, apple-eater must dispose of his barrel, and as there are 500 apples to a barrel it means a per capita of 100 apples a month, or three and one-third apples a day. By each household apple-eater doing his full duty according to the schedule this set forth, the present year's apple crop could be disposed of without export and to the general satisfaction of all concerned.

There are apples as good as oranges which later on will sell more in the market per dozen than the best Florida or California oranges, and the growers of these apples established an annual apple-day for the purpose of calling attention to them and increasing the consumption.

Explaining the reasons for the falling off in the demand for the apple, a contemporary says it is due to the making of tropical fruits, which years ago were luxuries, abundant and cheap. "The old, hardy pioneers," it says, "who were in the habit of carving up half a dozen apples before going to bed at night died, and their children took to bananas and tangerines. Once the United States senate was a scene of continuous apple paring. Nowadays only a few of the older and wiser statesmen are addicted to this wholesome fruit. Perhaps the present campaign of apple-eating will help in the apple revival."

NOT A PLAYTHING.

There are a few motor drivers who like to hear the auto horn and who manipulate it as if it were a plaything, when its use is exactly similar to the whistle on a locomotive or the gong on a fire truck—a warning of peril.

Chicago is on the way to so regulate the use of the horn that it may be quickly recognized by the pedestrians for whom it is intended as a warning of approach and danger. The auto horn ought to be as distinctive as any warning of danger and as carefully used.

Alfred Charles M. Thompson of Chicago, known as the father of the ordinance forbidding the use of the motor horn, and regulating the use of the automobile horn or warning signal in Chicago, making it mandatory that this signal shall only be used as a warning of danger, says:

"An automobile warning signal must be adequate in sound. To be adequate it must warn instantly. Its note should be harsh, abrupt, effective. The shrill, screaming signal is unnecessary. To say the note must be abrupt, covers the case. We do not want a musical signal, nor one which has to be sounded a number of times to gain attention. The warning signal gives must be instantaneous. A man who is warned needs to get out of the danger zone without stopping to think. He can think afterward, but first he must escape the danger."

"I recognize fully the fact that the use of the motor vehicle is rapidly increasing, and for this reason, if for none other, regulation by law of the warning signal is essential. It cannot be considered as a toy, and whoever uses it as such ought to be punished. I have no desire to make war on the motorist, but the rights of the thousands of pedestrians who daily cross and recross our streets must be protected. I have no thought that the majority of motorists hold any other view, but there is a careless element that must be restrained by law, if the public is to be adequately protected."

TRADE EXTENSION.

The merchants of Fitchburg, Mass., have organized as "The Fitchburg Trade Extension Association," for the purpose of adopting a popular American plan which has proved successful in other cities. This is what the Fitchburg News has to say of it:

"Under the plan adopted last night every representative merchant in the city will be asked to affiliate with the movement to increase the trade and to enlarge the trade radius of the city."

"Each merchant who comes into the plan will sign an agreement to pay a pro rata share of the cost, based on benefits actually received by himself. No trade, no pay, is the rule of the game."

"All fares will be paid in cash to visiting buyers by a local bank. The merchants in the plan settle with the bank at convenient intervals, usually once a month, in order to cover a wide range in the payment of fares the bank, to reimburse itself, may tax the individual merchant any amount necessary up to five per cent. of the amount of the sale in such case. While five per cent. is the maximum possible cost in any imaginable case, the cost of paying fares by co-operation averages between two and three per cent. in other American cities."

Where there is co-operative harmony a plan of this sort doubtless will succeed.

Dr. Mott's Capital says the board can save $1500 a year by putting into a municipal building; the money for the taxpayers by the amount of the salary $250 a month and the stenographer's salary $50 a year.

A western rancher's cellar marks the point where the boundary lines of Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and Arizona meet, hence he does not know what state he is in. The state of uncertainty has him.

KNOCKED COLLEGE YELLS.

When President Taft addressed the students of the University of Minnesota recently, he took occasion to compare the distinctive "barbaric yells" of the college boys today with the "graceful hurrahs" of Yale '78 and contemporary colleges, much to the discomfiture of modern invention.

It is not likely the president thinks they have fewer manners than other young men of their age and breeding, but that as representatives of great educational institutions their manners should be better than the average. Good manners and gracefulness should go hand in hand with the best mentality.

There is no reason why the college should be intolerant or frivolous. It has breadth and ability enough to always exhibit the best there is in youth without any display of eccentricity.

THE BOY SCOUT OF THE EMPIRE.

The Boy Scout is of British design and we are frequently told by opponents of the movement that it is purely military there. The way he knows is to read the English explanation of the movement, for that tells.

A writer for the Ottawa Citizen has this to say of the purpose of the movement throughout the empire:

"One great feature of the Boy Scout movement is the stimulus given to greater mental energy, and this while creating a greater mental development, it also creates a greater physical vigor. The two, equally developed, will result in a man well equipped for life's battle, and this thorough equipment is without export and to the general satisfaction of all concerned."

"He is influenced towards temperance, and gains a sound knowledge of a broad, practical religion. He is not taught these, but must find them gradually about him. He gets them on a good, sound working basis and learns to despise the words cant and hypocrisy. His outdoor life brings to him the greatest sermons from Nature, that great preacher. His physical health teaches him abstinence from all evil habits, and sermons and physical health combined with a mind resolutely strengthened combine in a unity giving the Boy Scout with a gradually built up reserve of energy which in his after life as a man will prove invaluable to him and must tend to his great benefit."

"Quick of eye, just as speedy in action, just as rapid mentally, he stands ready for the battle of life, full of energy and industry. Such men are what the nation wants, and the nation which can call them her sons can count on a sturdy, noble race of men, of high moral and physical ideal, of bright business ability, and of sterling honor."

The better citizen is naturally prepared to be a better soldier. Physical strength, mental acumen and well-grounded honor and integrity are a true foundation for the best and ablest of manhood and citizenship.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Dr. Cook is noticing that the word "welcome" is not on as many door-mats for him as it used to be.

The Philadelphia Inquirer wants to know how politics is to be made harmless and is getting no answers.

Orville Wright demonstrated a good point when he made an aeroplane stand still in mid-heavens for ten minutes.

Brunettes are more popular than ever; but there are men who have never seen a blonde who looked old-fashioned.

Happy thought for today: Those who talk of their acts of charity apparently forget these usually speak for themselves.

Have you noticed that the automobiles represent the male population a few of them go to church, but most of them do not.

The government is still disposing of public lands by lottery, if the practice is too wicked to be permitted the use of the mails.

The Lorimer investigation makes Illinois look ridiculous a thousand miles away. It is a pity she cannot make it look different.

Wisconsin is said to have carefully laid its insurgency aside in respect to the president's presence; but it did not forget to mark the hiding place.

Some of the senators who are violently opposing Taft were careful to keep in line until they got all the patronage that was coming to them.

When the Italians meet the Turks and Arabs on the open plains, they ## Threw Away His TRUSS!

Strenuous Old Sea Captain Fools the Doctors And Cures Himself.

No man or woman who is ruptured—no matter how severely or at what age—need despair of being cured.

Threw Away the Truss.

The case of Dr. W. C. Collins gives encouragement to all sufferers from rupture. Capt. Collins suffered a double rupture and was confined to his bed for years. No truss could hold such a rupture. Many physicians examined his case and pronounced an operation necessary. Capt. Collins kept experimenting on himself and finally to the astonishment of all he cured his rupture. He has never had any return of the trouble.

Dr. Collins sends his discovery to all people who are ruptured. If you will send the coupon below he will mail you a copy free of one week's trial treatment so you can test it on your own case. This cost you nothing and you are sure to be benefited. So mail the coupon now.

FREE TREATMENT COUPON.
Capt. W. C. Collins, Inc.,
Please send me one week's Text Treatment for Rupture. This is free. I will commence using it at once.
Name.....
Address.....
Town..... State.....

THE BULLETIN'S DAILY STORY

WOULDN'T BUY

"I am led by benevolent motives to ask your attention for a moment, madam," said the stranger of reverend appearance. "In my younger days I committed a great sin and now in the autumn of my life I am trying to atone for it by doing what I can for the benefit of my fellow men. I am entirely indifferent to mercenary considerations—my sole object is to make the world brighter and better. For this reason I have secured the agency for Prof. Windvickler's patent reversible feather duster."

"I don't want to hear another word from your lips," cried Mrs. Curlew. "Only day before yesterday another philanthropist of your kind came to the door just when I was putting bread into the oven, coming being expected for dinner, and my bread being well known to one and all, having taken first premium at the county fair, and this man he was trying to atone for his sins by giving me a duster."

"I heard him rummaging in the cupboard for his cough medicine, but paid no attention until recently he gave an agonizing howl as though he was being burned at the stake. Then he rushed into the room where all those refined women were holding his stomach in both hands, and I hope I never again shall hear such language from the lips of human beings."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"While this was going on I heard my husband step into the kitchen, coughing as though his heart would break. He is afflicted with the worst cough I ever heard, one of his ribs having penetrated his lungs some years ago when he attempted to ride a trick mule at the circus, which was a foolish thing for a man of his years to do."

"I heard him rummaging in the cupboard for his cough medicine, but paid no attention until recently he gave an agonizing howl as though he was being burned at the stake. Then he rushed into the room where all those refined women were holding his stomach in both hands, and I hope I never again shall hear such language from the lips of human beings."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

er necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"While this was going on I heard my husband step into the kitchen, coughing as though his heart would break. He is afflicted with the worst cough I ever heard, one of his ribs having penetrated his lungs some years ago when he attempted to ride a trick mule at the circus, which was a foolish thing for a man of his years to do."

"I heard him rummaging in the cupboard for his cough medicine, but paid no attention until recently he gave an agonizing howl as though he was being burned at the stake. Then he rushed into the room where all those refined women were holding his stomach in both hands, and I hope I never again shall hear such language from the lips of human beings."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."

"The next day, in the afternoon, I was entertaining the members of the Dignit Dozen club, which was organized for the purpose of supplying the Reekinos with palm leaf fans and other necessities of life, those unfortunately heathen having no department stores, so that they suffer for the most ordinary comforts. I was very proud to have the club meet at my house, for the women are among the best in town. Mrs. Korpink, the president, being the wife of the third assistant receiving teller at the Steenth National bank. Mrs. Pinkwood, wife of the deputy assessor, was reading a splendid paper on a new race of savages recently discovered in the arctic regions, said savages being so ignorant and benighted that when discovered they didn't even ask which team would win the pennant this year."

"However, I'm naturally so kind-hearted that I'm always doing things against my better judgment, and so I bought a bottle of the man's furniture polish and I have no doubt that he spent the money in riotous living, for most agents have red noses and chapped lips, and I have no doubt that he and the fact that their habits are nefarious. Being busy at the time, I put the bottle in the cupboard, where we keep all the medicines and pills and things we have bought in the past before we learned from experience what agents are like."